Hi Ciara! I wanted to follow up on this and see if we could get a meeting set with Rep. Latourette in the next couple weeks in the district? We could be very flexible on dates/times.

Thanks,
Ben

Hi Ciara! It would only 3-4 people but we won't know specifically who can attend until we have a date but we could let you know specifically once we get that and know everyone's availability. Usually it's 1-2 member of building trades and a teacher of public service employee. We could do just about any date as long as we have a week or so to plan.

Thanks,
Ben

Hello Ben,

Kate informed me of your call earlier today. I am still working with Rep. LaTourette to identify dates in the district for this meeting. Could you provide additional information, like how many attendees there would be and names of the attendees?

Thank you,

Ciara

Hello Alexis,

The next couple of weeks will not work for Representative LaTourette. Perhaps this is something that could be scheduled in June when her schedule opens up a bit more?

Ed Board Just Shy Of Unanimous Approval For Strategic Plan

Despite one member's objection that the document strayed too far into family matters, the State Board of Education on Tuesday overwhelmingly voted in favor of adopting a strategic plan for education for the years 2019-24.

The plan establishes three "core principles" of equity, partnerships and quality schools that will be applied toward the goal of the state seeing improvement every year in the percentage of high school graduates who are continuing their education, earning a living wage or serving in the military one year after graduation.

District 9 board member Stephanie Dodd said the document stemmed from the "most collaborative process" she has seen during her tenure on the board. She said she fully supports the document, but added the board will have to work to ensure the department implements the plan properly.

"It allows us a direction to move in that I think is in the best interest of every child," she said of the document.

Echoing her colleague, at-large board member Kara Morgan offered praise for the open nature of the process that led to the document's creation.

"Anyone who wanted to weigh in was listened to," she said.

District 10 board member Nick Owens said he views the plan as "something that unites all of our state."

"I see this plan as a framework for our future, not a mandate," he said.

While the plan received glowing reviews from her colleagues, District 7 board member Sarah Fowler said she could not support the document because it "steps out of the bounds of state government and into the bounds of the family."

"The plan continues to replace the role of the family in determining the social and emotional beliefs of their children," she said.

Ms. Fowler said she has specific concerns about references within the document to "defining expectations for social and emotional learning" for students.

Board member Meryl Johnson, of the 11th District, said she thinks the plan reflects the reality that schools often have to step in to ensure students receive needed assistance that may not be available at home.

"It would be so wonderful if every family was capable of doing what they needed to do for their children to help them be successful in school," she said.

Sen. Peggy Lehner (R-Kettering), an ex officio member of the board, said she views the plan as "an excellent document." She said she would attempt to "sell this plan as best I can" to the legislature.

In other action, the board approved stricter enrollment standards for schools seeking to qualify for dropout prevention and recovery report cards by a vote of 15-1, with Ms. Fowler voting against approval. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, May 14, 2018)

The board also voted 13-3 against a resolution approving the transfer of territory within the Columbus City School District to the Hamilton Local School District.

Insurer Task Force Details Drug Policy Recommendations

Addiction prevention, intervention and treatment are at the center of recommendations released Tuesday by a group of health insurers convened by Attorney General Mike DeWine.

The report is the culmination of several months of work by the state's health plans. Some of the 15 recommendations stem from practices individual plans shared with the rest of the industry, task force members said at a news conference.

The recommendations and the work by insurers marks another step in trying to address the opiate crisis, AG DeWine said.

"Certainly, the fight is far from over," he said. "We're starting to see, though, some promising results. What keeps the death rate up is the fact that we have moved significantly and tragically in Ohio to fentanyl. But there are some signs of progress."

The attorney general's office has filed lawsuits against other groups in efforts to address the opiate crisis, but in the case of insurance plans, AG DeWine said collaboration was the best approach.

"While we felt in other cases it was appropriate to file lawsuits, we felt in this case, to get the best results, it would be appropriate to put people in a room and see what they could come up with," he said. "This is one part of how we deal with the problem."

The group's recommendations for addiction prevention call for more coverage and encouragement for the use of non-opioid and non-pharmacological treatments for pain, targeted education efforts for high-volume prescribers and for patients, and reductions in the number of opioids prescribed to adolescents and young adults.

For intervention, the group recommended insurers educate prescribers about tapering guidelines for patients with chronic pain and encourage prescribers to reduce patients' dependence on opioids. They also suggested plans use "lock-in" programs, which can cut down on doctor-shopping by requiring targeted high-risk patients to use a specific pharmacy.

The lock-in program is already used by some insurers, including Buckeye Health Plan, whose president and CEO Bruce Hill said they use it to keep high-risk members from shopping at multiple pharmacies for repeated prescriptions.

"We identify the members, we assess their situation both clinically and from a social standpoint, and we lock them in to using just one pharmacy," he said.

Other intervention recommendations included using multidisciplinary teams to care for members with opioid-use disorder and directing providers to screen pregnant patients for opioid use throughout pregnancy.

Another suggestion called on plans to work with the government to coordinate drug treatment for people set to leave incarceration, including state prisoners and county jail inmates.

"Before people are released, the process of engaging them in health care starts," said Dr. Mario San Bartolome, medical director for substance abuse disorders at Molina Healthcare.

The report also recommended lawmakers give commercial insurance companies access to prescription information in the Ohio Automated Rx Reporting System, the state's database of controlled substance prescribing activity.

Miranda Motter, president and CEO of the Ohio Association of Health Plans, said the change is one plans have been pushing for over the past couple of years. Plans are generally aware when their members use insurance for a prescription, but they aren't if that member pays cash or otherwise doesn't file a claim.

"We don't have access, we don't have authorization to see that data today. That becomes another important piece of this puzzle," she said in an interview. "The opioid epidemic is not something that is unique to Medicaid, it is everywhere. If we can have that additional piece of information, that could be critical."

On drug treatment, the task force recommended plans eliminate or expedite prior authorizations for medication assisted treatment and increase reimbursement rates to cover the cost of treatments, including MAT.

Insurers are one part of the landscape of groups that are taking an active role in trying to address the drug epidemic, the attorney general said.

"If you compare what is going on in community after community today versus five years ago, three years ago, there's a lot more going on, communities are fighting back, there's an understanding of the problem," he said.

The recommendations drew praise from the Ohio Council of Behavioral health and Family Services providers.

"Attorney General DeWine and members of the task force have demonstrated great leadership in developing this report's recommendations," CEO Lori Criss said in a statement. "We are especially pleased with the overt recognition that Ohio needs vigorous enforcement of the federal Mental Health Parity and Addiction Equity Act of 2008, preventing insurance plans from imposing benefit limits on behavioral health services that do not exist for medical/surgical benefits. We also particularly appreciate the recommendations reducing prior authorization for medication assisted treatment and to increase reimbursement rates to adequately cover the cost of substance-use disorder treatment."

Quick and full claims payment is important, Ms. Criss noted. She pointed to CareSource, a Medicaid managed care plan that has recently encountered problems meeting the state's prompt payment standards.

CareSource officials told lawmakers last month that they are working with the Department of Medicaid to resolve problems, which began in the second half of 2017. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, May 10, 2018)

State Board Panel Delays Decision On Third-Grade Reading Benchmark

A State Board of Education committee Tuesday balked at recommending approval for a higher Third Grade Reading Guarantee promotion score, as members asked for more time to consider the change and discuss it with local school districts officials.

The Achievement and Graduation Requirements Committee debated the possibility of raising the score students would need to achieve on Ohio State Test for third grade English and language arts from 672, the benchmark for last school year, to 677 for the 2018-19 school year.

District 4 board member Pat Bruns said she would like further documentation outlining the Department of Education's rationale for its recommendation for the new bar and more time to talk with local officials before voting. She said she has concerns districts' improvements at helping young students learn to read would not be accurately represented on their report cards if the new benchmark goes into effect.

"That's the rub for me, that it sends kind of a false message," she said.

At-large board member Laura Kohler, the committee's chairwoman, said some districts initially might be frustrated with the change, but she reminded her fellow board members the state's ultimate goal is for every student to achieve a score of 700, which indicates proficiency.

"We need to balance that angst with what I see as our responsibility, and our responsibility is to those kids," she said. "We have to keep raising the bar."

Beyond the board's duty to its youngest students, Ms. Kohler said she supported increasing the benchmark to 677 because administrators and teachers have been aware the standards are going to get tougher and have been preparing for it.

"We're looking at a different landscape than we were a couple of year ago with the supports that are in place," she said.

Beth Hess, early literacy specialist for ODE, said additional resources being offered to districts include $35 million in federal funding from the Striving Readers Comprehensive Literacy Grant. She said the program has distributed funds to 46 awardees in support of early literacy improvement efforts.

While the committee was scheduled to vote on the recommendation this week ahead of a vote by the full board next month, board member Kara Morgan suggested the panel could table the discussion. She said the state board could pass its resolution on the topic as an emergency measure at its July meeting in order to set the new benchmark before the start of the next school year.

Ms. Kohler said that would work, but board members must provide ODE staff with a different rationale for setting the benchmark or a different number if they're not comfortable with the change to 677.

Although Ms. Kohler at first suggested the board could consider not increasing the standard, ODE Chief Legal Counsel Diane Lease said state law requires some kind of a bump in the promotion score.

Ms. Kohler said the board this fall should consider creating an outline of the state's long-term plan for "how we're going to get to 700" and how long it might take as a guide for the state's school districts.

Administration Continues Opposition To Codifying Treasurer's 'Checkbook' Website

The state budget director is marking the second anniversary of his office's Interactive Budget website with plans to reiterate concerns about a bill requiring the continuation of State Treasurer Josh Mandel's online "Ohio Checkbook."

Backed by Mr. Mandel but opposed by Office of Budget and Management Director Tim Keen, the legislation (HB 40) is set for a fourth hearing Wednesday in the House.

In earlier sponsor testimony on the proposal, Rep. Jonathan Dever (R-Cincinnati) and Rep. Dave Greenspan (R-Westlake) said that since Mr. Mandel initiated OhioCheckbook.com, the state has seen its transparency ratings by the U.S. Public Interest Research Group soar to number one from 46th in the nation.

"House Bill 40 will ensure that future treasurers, regardless of political affiliation or commitment to transparency, maintain this important tool that already is providing more accountable government to our state's residents," they stated. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 21, 2017)

Other supporters include the Ohio New Media Association, Americans for Prosperity-Ohio, the Buckeye Institute, Common Cause Ohio and Ohio Society of CPAs.

Nevertheless, Mr. Keen said in a recent interview that OBM, given its core mission, should be the agency that houses such a site and noted the Ohio's Interactive Budget website has been up and running for two years.

"OBM by law is charged with setting up and running the accounting system. OBM by law manages the budget process on behalf of the governor and then monitors and reviews the budget after the fact," he said.

"If you're going to put into law a requirement that this be done, my argument is it should be the agency that by law runs the accounting system where the data comes from - that runs and monitors the budget - that has the people who understand how the system works and the numbers - what they mean and what they're context is."

"That's not what the treasurer does," Mr. Keen added. "The treasurer invests money for the public and they sell bonds."

Mr. Mandel's site differs in some ways from OBM's, including the addition of financial information on local governments.

"I have no objection if they want to put something up (online) that's fine. I have no problem if they run a local (government) site," the OBM director said. He does have a problem with a state law requiring as much.

Critics have also raised concerns about duplicative efforts and costs. While OBM produces its information in-house for a cost of about $130,000, Mr. Mandel has paid about $2.5 million to OpenGov Inc. to operate its site.

But Mandel spokesman Chris Berry said most of that total deals with OpenGov's work on the local component of the website.

"OhioCheckbook.com, which posts over $650 billion in state spending data, cost $813,979.62 and was funded entirely by the Treasurer's office existing operating budget. OpenGov was not contracted to build the state site," he said in an email. "The Treasurer's office does partner with OpenGov to provide residents of Ohio the ability to view and search their local government expenditures in a user-friendly, digital format but this is different than the state site which is what HB40 deals with."

Deputy Treasurer Seth Metcalf said in earlier testimony on the bill that it does not address the local government component of the checkbook website, which Mr. Mandel wants to keep voluntary.

Despite its voluntary nature, dozens of local government entities have agreed to post their budgetary data on the site.

"Treasurer Mandel believes that when you give citizens the tools to better track government spending, more responsible decisions will be made," Mr. Metcalf said. "This legislation is just one more way to shine sunlight on government, so that taxpayers can follow their hard-earned tax dollars and hold public officials accountable."

HB40 is the third iteration of the proposal, as the prior two cleared the House but stalled in the Senate. They were House Bill 46 of the 131st General Assembly and House Bill 175 of the 130th General Assembly.

OBM describes its site as follows: "Ohio's Interactive Budget is a first of its kind, comprehensive website that provides open access to the financial and transactional data contained in the State's accounting system. The Interactive Budget presents a detailed look at the budget, spending and revenues using Tableau software (purchased by the state for use by all agencies) to share a graphic depiction of our data."

In the two years since the website launched in June 2016, more than 39,000 unique users visited our site more than 75,000 times, according to OBM. The data on the budget site is updated daily.

Public Universities' Annual Economic Impact Tops $40 Billion, Study Finds

The presidents of Ohio's public universities Tuesday touted a study showing their institutions, students and alumni added $42 billion to state's economy in fiscal year 2016-17 as a rationale for increased investment from the legislature.

The study, which Economic Modeling Specialists International conducted for the Inter-University Council of Ohio, also determined one of 12 jobs in the state is supported directly or indirectly by public universities and their students. The report also found Ohio students receive $4.60 in higher earnings for every $1 they spend on tuition, supplies and other costs related to attending a public university.

Jay Gershen, president of Northeast Ohio Medical University and chairman of the IUC board, said another key finding from the study was that the government sees $4.10 in economic benefits for every dollar state and local governments spend in support of the system.

"The study provides solid, quantifiable evidence of the value of Ohio's public institutions of higher education, including the fact that they generate more tax dollars than they collect, which strengthens the rationale for supporting a robust system of public universities," he said.

Hannah Ruffridge, assistant director of consulting for EMSI, said the state benefits in multiple ways from its spending on higher education. She said university graduates tend to pay more in state taxes, while spending on the university system decreases the state's costs in areas such as health, unemployment and welfare benefits, as well as prisons.

"All those are government savings that will be experienced by taxpayers," she said.

The IUC released the report amid its ongoing campaign known as Forward Ohio, which calls for additional investment from the state in higher education to help shrink the state's talent gap. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, May 14, 2018)

More than 155,000 jobs - about half of which have a salary of $50,000 or more- sit open in the Ohio, according to the state's Ohio Means Jobs website.

"Our state's economic future, our collective ability to attract and retain jobs investment and jobs depends on our ability to supply employers with skilled, credentialed workers," Dr. Gershen said, adding that "no entity" will play a larger role in shrinking the gap than the state's public university system.

Ohio State University President Michael Drake echoed his colleague's comments.

"We play an indispensable role in closing the gap we have in the qualifications that we need to power industries forward," he said.

Although the study measured the economic impact of the university system over one year, Ms. Ruffridge said the state should expect to see similar totals to the $42 billion figure in future years.

"This (result) will be repeated for the most part across year after year," she said.

Sen. Randy Gardner (R-Bowling Green), who offered introductory remarks at the press conference at which the study was unveiled, said while encouraging residents to seek baccalaureate and advanced degrees is important, the state also needs more workers with associate degrees and experience in skilled trades.

"We really need an all-of-the-above education attainment approach in this state if we are going to meet the diverse demands of Ohio's economy," he said.

IUC President Bruce Johnson said the report does not come with any specific recommendations for the legislature, although he said the implied advice should be "relatively obvious."

"We always encourage (additional investment) because it pays off for the taxpayer, it pays off for the student and it pays off the state government," he said.

Workforce Board Reviews Changes To OhioMeansJobs, Library Initiative

OhioMeansJobs is about to get even more features to help connect prospective employees and employers, it was announced Tuesday.

Mark Birnbrich, project director of OhioMeansJobs, said more than 100 enhancements are coming to the website through a partnership with Monster.com.

Among the new tools that will be available on the site is one to teach users about financial literacy and another designed to address skills gaps.

With the latter, a user will upload their resume, answer questions and select an occupation, Mr. Birnbrich told members of the Governor's Executive Workforce Board.

Once completed, the website will provide users with guidance on overcoming their skills gap.

OhioMeansJobs also plans to roll out several new mobile app features during the State Fair. The app will allow users to check in and out to comply with programs in which they are participating. It will also push jobs using geofencing and pinpoint the locations on a map.

"We'll hopefully have these signs all throughout the state fair," Mr. Birnbrich said of the marketing strategy.

Another feature will provide employers with talent matching upon making a job posting. Other changes include job search by degree or certificate; a career coach; a school finder; a job search heat map; and a work values tool that allows users to determine what occupations best match their personality and work style preference.

Sen. Bill Beagle (R-Tipp City) questioned whether the website will remain easy to use given all the changes.

"That is something we are concerned about just because we are adding all these great features," Mr. Birnbrich responded.

Workforce Development: Held at the Columbus Metropolitan Library, much of the meeting was focused on ways in which libraries are serving their communities to boost the state's workforce.

Debbie Saunders, director of the Samuel L. Bossard Memorial Library in Gallia County, said her library is looking to solve the problem of a lack of broadband in rural Ohio through the use of a mobile hotspot device that library card holders can borrow for up to two weeks at a time.

"Our libraries play an important role in narrowing this technological gap," she said.

Launched in March 2017 with 20 kits, the program has grown to include 100 devices with a wait list of 200 people.

The program allows people to take advantage of online training opportunities, apply for jobs and more, Ms. Saunders said.

Patrick Losinski, CEO of Columbus' library system, said the 22 locations throughout central Ohio are a place for learning and job training.

"It's not uncommon for us to have someone that lost a job in manufacturing come in for keyboard and mouse training," he said.

Asked about how he takes the libraries' services to those on the streets, Mr. Losinski acknowledged that libraries are no longer a passive service and the system has partnered with non-profits and school systems. But he also said the public recognizes libraries as a valuable resource.

"With six million visitors to our locations more people are coming in than perhaps most people understand," he said.

Ryan Burgess, director of the workforce panel, said progress is being made on a recommendation in the state's two-year budget (HB 49) that the board partner with libraries across the state. Thus far, the board has entered into 57 memorandums of understanding.

He said more than 8.7 million Ohioans have library cards and the state ranks first nationally in library visits, making them a key partner.

In-Demand Jobs Week: Mr. Burgess said with 150 events across the state, In-Demand Jobs Week proved to be a success.

During the week, he said, traffic to OhioMeansJobs increased by 69%. The event also received about 1,500 mentions on Twitter, reaching 5.9 million Twitter users.

"I think it was a success," he said. "We are already hearing about communities that are planning for their 2019 events."

Brown Up With New Ad; DeWine Picks Up Labor Endorsement; O'Connor Seeks To Distance Himself From Pelosi...

U.S. Sen. Sherrod Brown on Tuesday released his third ad of the general election campaign.

Unlike the first two spots, the Cleveland Democrat did not go negative in the most recent one, which focuses on his opposition to trade deals.

"I've made protecting Ohio jobs my top priority," he says in the 30-second spot, "For Ohio." "I'm proud I voted against NAFTA and trade deals with Colombia and South Korea and opposed the Trans-Pacific Partnership that put our jobs at risk."

Labor Endorsement: Attorney General Mike DeWine on Tuesday picked up another union endorsement.

The Ohio Conference of Plasterers & Cement Masons is the latest trade union to back his gubernatorial candidacy.

"Our members want to know that Ohio is going to be a great place to work and raise a family, not just today, but for their kids' and grandkids' generations, which is a vision represented for every Ohioan through Mike DeWine," Kenneth Vierling, president of the union, said in a release.

Pelosi Distance: Danny O'Connor on Tuesday released his first general election campaign ad in his congressional bid.

In "New Leadership," the Franklin County Recorder talks about his small town upbringing and seeks to distance himself from U.S. Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.)

"I think we need a change in leadership on both sides of the aisle," he says. "Paul Ryan's not doing anything for working families. But we need new leadership on the Democratic side of things, too. We need a new generation of leadership."

North Korea: Gov. John Kasich weighed in Tuesday on President Donald Trump's meeting with the North Korean leader.

The potential 2020 presidential candidate in a statement called the results of the meeting between Mr. Trump and North Korean dictator Kim Jong-Un "long on form and short on substance."

"North Korea has a history of misleading the west and backing away from agreements," he said. "Many previous attempts have failed. Promises from North Korea don't matter; we should not back off our economic and political pressure until there is a verifiable agreement and implementation has begun."

Special Election: A poll released by Monmouth University found Sen. Troy Balderson (R-Zanesville) holding a comfortable lead over Mr. O'Connor in the special election to replace former U.S. Rep. Pat Tiberi.

The poll found that Sen. Balderson currently holds a lead of 43-33% over Mr. O'Connor. Using a likely voter model that includes a surge of Democratic voters in Franklin County, Sen. Balderson still holds a lead of 46-39%.

Patrick Murray, director of the independent Monmouth University Polling Institute, said in a statement those numbers do not bode well for a "blue wave" sweeping Mr. O'Connor to victory in the right-leaning district.

"Democrats seem to be more settled on a candidate than Republicans and O'Connor may have an opening to win over some of those undecided voters. But the real challenge may be motivation rather than persuasion," he said.

In other developments, Sen. Balderson announced he was donating $10,000 he had received in Senate campaign contributions from Electronic Classroom of Tomorrow founder William Lager to charities. ECOT closed earlier this year and remains under scrutiny over its attendance reporting practices.

Preexisting Conditions: The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee is going on the offensive against U.S. Rep. Mike Turner (R-Dayton), attacking him for the decision of the administration of President Trump to no longer defend an Affordable Care Act provision protecting those with preexisting conditions.

"Never Stop" is part of a five-figure ad buy that will run on Facebook, according to the DCCC.

"After their failure to fully repeal our healthcare, Republicans persisted by gutting key parts of the Affordable Care Act in their tax bill, and are now using that opening to end protections for people with pre-existing conditions like cancer, diabetes and asthma," Chairman Ben Ray Lujan said in a release.

New Staffers: U.S. Rep. Jim Renacci (R-Alliance) has added two new staffers to his U.S. Senate campaign.

Sarah Clamp has been brought on to serve as deputy campaign manager. She last managed a U.S. Senate campaign in West Virginia. Leslie Shield will serve as senior communications advisor after previously holding the title of vice president of communications for the National Restaurant Association.

"As we work to meet with more people across Ohio and talk about our plans to fight for them in the U.S. Senate, Leslie's and Sarah's experience will be a great asset," Rep. Renacci said in a release.

Agency Briefs: Husted Issues Guidance On Voter Rolls After Court Ruling; Auditor; ODNR

County election boards must hold off on resuming the "supplemental process" of scrubbing voter rolls until after the November elections, Secretary of State Jon Husted announced Tuesday.

His guidance was delivered via a communication sent by Assistant Secretary of State Matthew Damschroder in the wake of Monday's split U.S. Supreme Court ruling that upheld the state's system for removing registered voters from the rolls after they skip elections and don't respond to notices. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, June 11, 2018)

"You are hereby advised to take no action until further notice regarding Ohio's supplemental process that has been on hold since this litigation began in 2016. Once additional information and instructions are available we will provide it to you," Mr. Damschroder wrote.

He added that "it is important to remember that even though the Court clearly said Ohio's longstanding supplemental list maintenance process did not conflict with the National Voter Registration Act, the other requirements of the NVRA prohibit list maintenance cancellations prior to this November's general election."

Husted spokesman Sam Rossi said that's because federal elections are slated for Aug. 7 and Nov. 6, and federal law prohibits cancelling voter registrations less than 90 days prior to a federal election.

State Auditor: Dave Yost on Tuesday released an audit of the Village of Alexandria in Licking County that details the extent of the theft perpetrated by former fiscal officer Laura Vanscoy Andrews.

The auditor ordered her to repay $201,153 to the for "checks she wrote to herself, money she stole from deposits and payments that lacked supporting documentation."

"This fiscal officer's abuse of power was toxic to the Village of Alexandria," Auditor Yost said in a statement. "Her prison sentence is a well-deserved punishment for the seven years she spent ripping off the community."

Ms. Vanscoy Andrews pleaded no contest in November to the crimes and was sentenced to four years in prison and ordered to pay restitution plus court costs.

In addition to verifying her crimes, the audit found "no evidence that village council monitored financial activity, and the village had no accounting policies in place, Mr. Yost's office reported. The village has reported taking steps to strengthen its internal controls.

Department of Natural Resources: The agency and U.S. Hotel and Resort Management announced new renovations and acquisitions stemming from the group assuming management of Maumee Bay State Park Lodge and Conference Center.

U.S. Hotel will also operate four other lodges including Deer Creek, Mohican, Punderson and Salt Fork, which brings their total to eight throughout Ohio. The group also runs Burr Oak, Hueston Woods and Shawnee lodges.

"U.S. Hotel is a great partner, and we are excited for them to expand their work with our state park lodges around the state," said ODNR Director James Zehringer. "This is a win-win situation for both ODNR and U.S. Hotel, but most important, this change and new investment will really benefit our guests."

"What started out as a simple quest to get our fourth Ohio State Park has morphed into something we could only have dreamed of," said Tom Biegler, President and CEO of U.S. Hotel and Resort Management. "The Maumee Bay contract was the 'Holy Grail'. We knew that it was the newest of the lodges, but it was also in the most incredible location, sitting on the shore of Lake Erie. This is exactly where we want to be and we're anxious to see where our experience will take us going forward."

U.S. Hotel plans to build a "Reunion Cabin" on the shore of Lake Erie at Maumee Bay that will accommodate parties of more than 20 with large bedrooms and a state-of-the-art kitchen, according to ODNR. The company will also construct additional camping cabins to take advantage of Maumee Bay's beautiful Lake Erie views.

U.S. Hotel began operations at the Maumee Bay Lodge Jan. 31 under a contract that entails the company committing $2.5 million for property improvements.

Subject: Today's Jobs Report

Dear Representative,

Ohio received some very good news today as the May jobs report showed that we created 20,100 new private sector jobs last month, bringing the total number of private sector jobs created in Ohio since 2011 to 520,500. The data shows that since January, Ohio private sector jobs are growing 48% faster than the nation (1.23% to 0.83%).

Working together to continually focus on areas critical to long-lasting jobs growth, our economy continues to get stronger. The formula is working: fiscal responsibility, common sense regulations and tax cuts. As you may remember me sharing earlier this year, Ohio was named as the most improved state for business in 2018 based on a nationwide survey of CEOs by Chief Executive Magazine. Ohio jumped into the top ten, 35 full places higher from 2010 – making Ohio the most improved state in the nation over that time.

I'm including some other relevant economic data below:

Dear Representative LaTourette,

As a REALTOR, and member of the Ohio REALTORS, I am asking for your support to bring House Bill 211 - our top legislative priority for 2018 - to the floor for a vote. House Bill 211 has passed the House Economic Development Commerce and Labor Committee by a 12-2 margin and should be brought up for a vote. House Bill 211 proposes much-needed consumer protections in the home buying process.

Home inspection remains one of the last unregulated acts in the home buying process. The inspection report often serves as the final say in what is undoubtedly the largest financial investment a consumer will make in their lifetime. House Bill 211 simply establishes basic, common-sense standards for education and licensing of inspectors. More importantly, it provides multiple avenues for existing inspectors to continue their business operations.

We are hopeful that with your support, House Bill 211 can be placed on this week's calendar for a vote. Your vote in support of this bill will ensure that when a consumer hires a home inspector, the inspection is being done by a qualified inspector with the knowledge and background to provide a quality inspection report. House Bill 211 is supported by both REALTORS and the Ohio Chapter, Southern Ohio Chapter and the North Central Ohio Chapter of the American Society of Home Inspectors members.

We ask for your SUPPORT of House Bill 211.

Sincerely,

Robert Gold
